

Thin Places

Sarah Ring is an energetic extrovert. She is a traveler, mom, teacher, follower of Christ, and a life-long learner. She loves hiking and spending time with her husband and son.

“As a camper, I was excited to come to camp! I loved the outdoors and learning about God. I was looking forward to having fun outside and having new experiences and making new friends.”

“Wanake was a place where I encountered God and fellow people on my faith journey. I found that there were these thin sacred places around me where there was nature plus more than nature. At camp I heard God calling me and I found that if you pray intentionally, God shows up. God spoke to me at camp. He was direct and helped me gain new understanding of scripture. Throughout the years of coming to Wanake I continually met God at camp. Wanake was a place where I refueled and reset. Camp helped me refocus and listen to God.”

“My life is different because of camp. Wanake has impacted my life in a multitude of ways. Camp gave me mentors. I was given the space to ask questions during discussions around the campfire and in Bible study. Camp gave me a place and pace to build spiritual disciplines into my day. My love of travel came from all the international counselors who told me stories about their home countries. The camp experience helped shape my faith. Camp is where God became real to me.”

“There is true Christian community that comes with camp. Wanake allows campers to have the space apart from their daily routines and distractions to experience Christian community. My hope is that Wanake will continue to be a place where people can have the space to be open to hearing God’s call on their lives. That future campers will meet God here just as I did.”

Your generous support allows campers like Sarah to experience God's presence in creation, prayer, scripture study, spiritual disciplines, and a Jesus-centered community. Thank you for providing a place where God becomes real and faith formation takes place in the lives of children and teens! Wanake is grateful for your investment.
